Town Shortage Data Given by Mansfield

That the Town of Redwood City will recover about sixty-five cents on the dollar of the shortage found in the accounts of the late treasurer, Frank K. Towne, was announced by City Attorney Mansfield at the meeting of the board of trustees Monday evening.

Mansfield stated that the claim of the town against the estate had been allowed by the superior court. The total shortage in the city treasury was found to be $80,036.70. Of this shortage, $20,000 was made up by the bondsmen of the late teasurer, that being the full amount of the bonds. The First National Bank, of which he was cashier and where the funds had been deposited, paid an additional $10,000, making the present shortage in the treasury $50,036.70. Of this amount Mansfield stated, the city will recover more than $30,000.

Mansfield stated that the entire Towne estate, with the exception of the home, which the court set aside to the widow, would be sold for the benefit of the ceditors. But, he said, it was possible that instead of making a forced sale of the assets, that the property of the estate might be turned over to a trustee for the creditors in order that a sale might be made to the best advantage. In this way, he stated, the town as well as the other creditors might recover an even greater part of its loss than was foreseen at the present time.

OLIVE DRAB SUITS FOR LOCAL COPS

City Board Selects Color for Uniforms

Local "bobbies" will henceforth appear on the streets sporting a smart uniform of olive drab. The latter color was selected as the color best suited to the local policemen at the meeting of the city council Monday evening. Samples of the olive drab and of navy blue were examined by the councilmen.

The matter of purchasing the uniforms was discussed by the board. Mayor Beeger explained the various plans in use by other cities of the peninsula. In South San Fancisco, he said, the officers are given two uniforms a year. Burlingame and San Mateo supply the men with one uniform a year. In Palo Alto the men buy their own uniforms but are reimbursed for the first one after they have been on the force six months. The latter plan was adopted for Redwood City.

The suggestion of Trustee Stafford that lockers be supplied in the basement of the city hall, where the officers could keep their uniforms, and that they change their clothes there, and only appear in uniform when on duty, was appoved by the board.

County School Head Addresses Kiwanians

Members of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club, their friends and wives of some of the members enjoyed an address Wednesday at the Episcopal parish house by Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, county superintendent of schools of San Mateo county. Miss Abbott spoke particularly in regard to the lives of Washington and Lincoln and of the influence they have had and should have upon the lives of growing boys and girls of this country.

The chairman of the meeting Wednesday was Henry Steinberger, who for thirty years has been clerk of the board of trustees of the Redwood City school district.

Special musical numbers by Mrs. H. Clattenburg and Otis M. Carrington were much enjoyed. The latter sang one of his own composition from the little opera, "Margarite," one of his first published productions.

American Legion Not in Politics

Commenting upon the report that the local post of the American Legion was sponsoring a candidate to the city council in the coming election, Commander R. C. Frazer this week issued a decided statement in the negative. "The man said to be supported by the Legion post," said Commander Frazer, "is a high-class gentleman with many friends in post will doubtless support his candidacy individually. But as a post the American Legion is not concerned with the municipal election to the point of backing any candidate."

TRAFFIC LIGHTS TO AID SAFETY

Clubs Demand Signals At Highway Crossings

A committee representing the Affiliated Improvement Clubs of Redwood City appeared before the members of the Redwood City town council at its meeting Monday evening with a request for traffic signals at the Broadway intersection of the highway and at Five Points. The Affiliated Clubs were represented by E. Folsom, president of the Greater Redwood City Improvement Association, Charles Hildebrandt, president of the South Redwood Improvement Club and E. R. McNee, secretary of the Redwood City Promotion Association.

Folsom was the first to address the board, and explained what was desired, he in turn, introduced McNee, who had with him plans and specifications of different types of signals and installations, as well as the cost of the various types.

The signal proposed by the club for erection at Broadway would be of the pedistal type and would cost $700. A signal of the suspended type for the Five Points intersection would cost $540, MeNee stated.

The board thanked the committee for the interest they had taken in the matter. Mayor Beeger stated that the board had been faced with the traffic problem on the highway for the past ten years. Various plans had been tried he stated, with varying success. The town had always favored traffic regulation, Beeger stated, but this had been opposed by the county traffic officers, who cited the number of traffic accidents at regulated ...

The board asked i... tee had considered t... crossing signal in u... lingame. This type is ... the highway traffic at al... cept when a car approaches from the side street, when a switch operated by a car passing over a lever in the street automatically halts highway traffic.

McNee replied that this type of signal had been investigated, and that it was found to be unsatisfactory. In one case, he reported, while he was obseving this particular signal, a woman had stopped her car on the control lever and tied up traffic on the highway for more than a mile before she moved off the signal.

The board accepted the plans and specifications prepared by McNee, who is engaged in this type of work in San Francisco, and the matter was turned over to the city engineer and city electrician for a recommendation. Mayor Beeger, however, stated that before anything could be done about installing a signal at Five Points, that the matter would have to be taken up with the State Highway Commission, as they controlled half of the Five Points intersection.

BELMONT TO GET FIRE PROTECTION

The formation of a fire district at Belmont was urged upon the board of supervisors Monday by Attorney Jos. B. Gordon, representing the signers of a petition sent to the board some time ago. Action had been postponed by the supervisors pending a decision on an appeal which had been made from the decision of Judge Hudner sitting in the superior court of this county which resulted in the disincorporation of the city of Belmont.

When asked for an opinion in the matter District Attorney Franklin Swart stated should the supreme court reverse the action of the court of this county that all steps toward the formation of a fire district including the incorporated territory would be illegal, but said that he did not believe that the case would be reversed. Supervisor Brown spoke in favor of the action and upon a motion made by her and seconded by Supervisor Hickey the board decided to take the necessary steps for the formation of a district.

WHITE SHOE STORE NOW UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

The White Shoe Store on Main street has been purchased by Otto Painter an experienced shoe dealer, who has purchased the stock, fixtures and business from Joe Bertolucci, the former owner. Painter is now conducting a sale of the present goods, following which he plans to remodel the store and install entirely new lines of high grade merchandise.

The new owner has been very favorably impressed with this city during the week in which he has been engaged in business here, and believes that there is a bright future for this part of the peninsula.

Well-known Coastside Pioneer Answers Last Summons

Andrew T. Gilcrest a pioneer resident of Halfmoon Bay who answered the final summons early last Friday morning is mourned by a large circle of friends and acquaintences throughtout the state.

Some time prior to his death he endured much pain but he bore his suffering with true christian fortitude, knownig that when the end came his body would be freed from pain and his soul out of prison.

Andrew Gilcrest was born on the Gilcrest ranch near Halfmoon Bay over sixty years ago. There his infant ears first heard the sound of the ocean waves as they dashed upon the rocks and his first sight beheld the mountains surrounding his birthplace through which he hunted in after years for the wild deer the coy rabbit and wily quail. Being an expert hunter and, knowing the haunts of the game in the mountain fastness, he was sought after by sportsmen who desired the benefit of his knowledge. He was unselfish, giving aid and assistance to every hunter who sought game. Though often killing the limit in deer he would take no credit but would rather let the honor rest on other shoulders.

For thirty years he was the president of the Halfmoon Bay Gun Club which controlled a preserve of some two thousand acres of land on the coast side. Among the members of the club are several of the county officials, including Assessor D. P. Flynn and District Attorney Franklin Swart. The deceased loved to entertain his friends at the annual meeting of the members and during the hunting season. It was certain that when Mr. Gilcrest went out for a deer he would come back with a buck. Often he would give the credit for the killing to some companion. The deceased was a true and unselfish sportsman, always obeying to the letter the rules of the sport. He was heartily interested in the club, always looking out for the property and watching every detail concerning the hunting trips. Just a few minutes before he passed away he inquired of a friend if the rent and taxes upon the preserve were paid.

The deceased was a true friend, tender in his kindness to others, and ever ready to make any sacrifice to help a friend. All the members of the organization to which he belonged for so long can testify to this for they have been recepients of his benevolence.

The funeral last Saturday morning was one of the largest ever attended in Halfmoon Bay. The Catholic church as crowded to the doors with sorrowing relatives and friends from all sections. Father Kelly, who celebrated the requiem high mass, delivered a worthy eulogy over the remains of the deceased, paying a tribute to the his loyalty and good Christian life and to his fine religious spirit of fairness and love of justice.

Followed by a large cortege the remains of the good man and true sportsman, devoted father and loving husband, were laid away on the sunny slopes, not far from where life began just within sound of the roaring billows and with the towering mountains tenderly casting their shadows o'er his grave, where he will sleep his long last sleep undisturbed.

Besides his widow, he is survived by the following, children, Rita, Agnes, Helen Gilcrest, Andrew Gilcrest and Georgiana Eckelson.

Sheriff Jim McGrath Holds "Bargain Day"

Wednesday was "bargain day" at the county jail when Sheriff McGrath and his deputies disposed of about $50,000 worth of stolen goods to 31 persons who identified the articles as having been stolen from them. The articles were those seized at the time Jose Asuino and Salvatore Silverstrucci.

Practically all of the merchandise seized was identified by owners Wednesday. The stolen goods represented a series of burglaries extending over two years and in ten different towns. The places where the pair had operated were Palo Alto, Atherton, Gilroy, Hollister, San Jose, Mountain View, Watsonville, Los Altos, Salinas and Cupertino.

One man identified a phonograph which had been stolen a year ago last November, and another party identified a monogramed set of silverware which had been taken a year ago last January.

Victims of recent burglaries were able in some cases to recover all of the goods which they had lost. In cases where the goods had been stolen for a longer period, many articles had been disposed of by the thieves.

Jose Aquino, arrested by Atherton police two weeks ago and charged with burglary was found guilty by a jury in the court of Judge Geo. H. Buck yesterday. The jury which heard the evidence against the accused returned with a verdict of burglary in the second degree within five minutes after leaving the court room. Aquino will be sentenced by Judge Buck tomorrow.

Salvatore Silverstrucci, confessed burglar, has been held in the county jail here as a witness in the trial of his alleged partner, Jose Aquino. Silverstrucci, who was arrested in an apartment in San Francisco where stolen goods valued at $50,000 were found, entered a plea of guilty.

Aquino, whose arrest by Atherton police lead to the arrest of Silverstrucci plead not guilty to the charge of burglary. Silverstrucci will not be sentenced to the penitentiary until after the trial of Aquino.

Increased Coast Trade Makes Development

The establishment of bulkhead and pierhead lines along the bay frontage from Hunters Point in San Francisco to Ravenswood Point in the southern part of this county is being urged by the Civic League of Improvement Clubs and other civic organizations. A resolution passed ly the Civic League has been forwarded to Congressman Welch of San Francisco, urging the passage of a house resolution providing for the establishment of bulkhead and pierhead lines in this district. Similar action has been taken by the boards of supervisors of the counties, by chamber of commerce and other organizations.

In regard to the proposed improvement and the necessity for it, W. W. Watson, president of the Civic League of Improvement Clubs is quoted as saying:

"Only three months ago we celebrated the arrival at her home port of the magnificent Malolo. Within a month we saw the inauguration of the new service of the United Fruit Lines; recently there was an announcement of a new line that is starting service between this port and the Atlantic Coast, an another from Europe to San Francisco. The motor shop San Francisco, operated by a German line, is on its way to this port. During the last week the electrically driven California arrived."

Injunction Sought By Atherton Town

Suit to compel Joseph Shearer and Edward H. White to remove one of two houses which have been moved onto a lot owned by White and Shearer in Atherton has been filed in the superior court here by attorneys for the Town of Atherton. In the suit it is alleged that the moving of the two houses onto a single lot is in defiance of an ordinance of the town which limits the number of houes which shall be allowed on any one lot to one. The ordinance was passed by the Atherton town council on May 31, 1927.

The town is represented in the action by City Attorney Arthur H. Redington and by Ross & Ross of this city. The property in question is a lot on the Selby tract facing Stockbridge avenue.

Supervisors Form New Sanitary District

Plans and specifications for the construction of sewers were approved by the board of supervisors Monday and the Millbrae Sanitary District was launched into existance. The plans and specifications for sewers for the new district were presented to the board by Attorney Bert Mansfield of Redwood City. No protests either written or verbal were received.

RESIDENTS RESENT SIDEWALK OMISSION

Charles Ward apeared before the board of trustees Monday relative to the action taken in regard to the laying of a sidewalk in front of the Foley property on Jefferson avenue. Ward had brought the matter before the board at a previous meeting when it was stated that all property owners along Jefferson avenue had been compelled to lay sidewalk in front of their property except that property belonging to the estate of the late P. J. Foley. The reason for this omission as explained by the board were that the property was so near the creek that it was not thought necessary to install sidewalk.

Mayor Beeger stated at that time, however, that if the other residents of the district petitioned for the laying of a sidewalk in front of the Foley property that the board would take action on the petition. At the next meeting of the board the petition was presented to the board.

When the petition was received the board decided that the matter should be explained to Mrs. Foley and that she be allowed to do the work under private contract.

When the matter was brought up at the last meeting it was stated that Mrs. Foley had been interviewed and that she had refused to have the work done. Ward then asked what the board intended to do in the matter. It was decided that the work would have to be done as an improvement district and advertised for bids. Before this action was taken, however, the city clerk was instructed to write to Mrs. Foley and give her ten days in which to contract for the work and in this way save the additional expense of advertising for bids.

The Masonic Club Room Committee will hold a dance this evening at the Masonic Temple. Receipts will be used in furnishing the club rooms of the temple.

THRALL QUITS SCHOOL POST

Glascock Resigns; Trustees Refuse In San Mateo School

The tendering of the resignation of W. L. Glascock, superintendent of the San Mateo-Burlingame high school district, and the refusal of the trustees of the district to resign marked the recent developments in the tangle resulting from a shortage in the funds of that district.

The report of a committee of nine citizens of the district who had investigated the situation was made public this week. The report of the committee laid the blame for the shortage upon the mismanagement of the affairs of the district by Glascock and Frank Thrall clerk of the board of trustees. The latter was also charged with malfeasance of office by reason of the purchase of $12,000 of electrical goods by the board from Thrall, under the name of the H. & H. Hardware Co., a concern which does not handle electrical goods, but which occupied the same store as Thrall, an electrical dealer.

In the report the resignation of Thrall and Glascock was asked. The other members of the board of trustees were freed of blame in the matter, but it was suggested that if their presence on the board would militate against the passage of a special tax to be voted upon the people, that they had better resign as well.

Glascock's resignation was handed in Monday night and is to take effect whenever a successor is appointed. No action has been taken yet upon an appointment of a successor to Glascock, as it was felt that during the crises it would be better to have the president superintendent in charge than to appoint a new man unfamiliar with the details of the events of the past year.

Miss Abbott, county superintendent of schools has been in close touch with the situation in San Mateo and has been devoting her efforts to bringing order out of chaos. She this week denied that it was within her province to eject any member from the board of trustees. This is the work of the superior court of the county, it was stated, and any citizen of the district, may upon showing cause demand such action.

The resignation of Thrall was sent into the office of Miss Abbott late yesterday, although it was at first reported that he would stand with the other trustees in their refusal to resign.

In the meantime preparations are being made for a special tax election to be held throughout the district on Monday, at which time a proposition of levying a special tax of 38 cents will be voted upon. If the proposition of the special tax fails to carry it will result in the closing of the schools. An offer of a loan of $50,000 to aid the school district in the crises was made by the president of the Bank of Italy. This could not be accepted, according to District Attorney Swart, as the trustees of the district are not allowed to borrow money for the district, nor could they pay this money back out of the next year's taxes.

Supervisors Canvass School Bond Election

The returns of the recent election held for voting upon the issuance of bonds by the Sequoia Union High School distict were canvassed Monday by the county board of supervisors. The returns were presented to Edmund Scott, assistant district attorney, showing that Proposition No. 1 for the issuance of $50,000 in bonds for the purchase of a site for a branch high school in the future was defeated. Proposition No. 2 for the issuance of $250,000 in bonds for the enlargement of the high school was carried. Bids for the sale of the $250,000 bonds will be opened by the board of supervisors on March 12.

BOARD SETS APRIL 9 AS ELECTION DATE

April 9th was named officially as the date for holding the municipal election by an action of the board of trustees Monday evening. The resolution fixing the date was made upon a motion of Trustee Stafford and seconded by Trustee Thorning.

The same date was set as the day for the special election at which two bond issues will be voted upon. One of these is for the erection of a new fire house on Jefferson and Myrtle street; the other for the construction of a subway beneath the highway near James street for use of children attending the grammar and high schools.

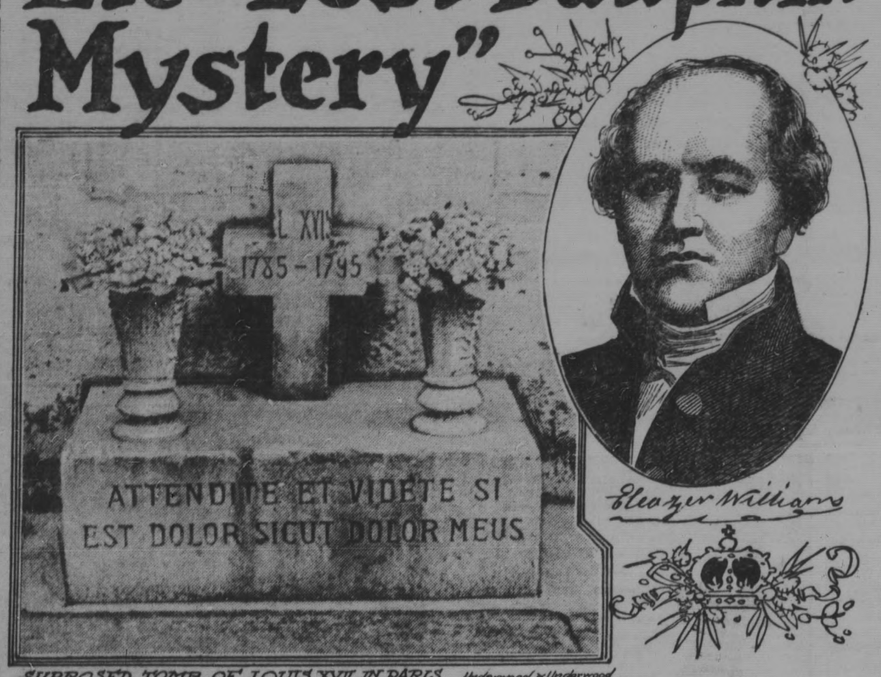
The "Lost Dauphin Mystery"



SUPPOSED TOMB OF LOUIS XVII IN PARIS Underwood & Underwood

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE other day a group of French Royalists gathered in the Abbey of St. Denis, north of Paris, where lie the Kings of France in their royal tombs. The occasion was the one hundred thirty-fifth anniversary of the execution of Louis XVI which took place during the French revolution and they had gathered there in memory of the Bourbon monarch and his Queen, Marie Antionette. While they thus honored these two victims of that historic tragedy, they were denied the privilege of paying a similiar mark of respect to a third, Louis XVII, the lost Dauphin of France, for the reason that no one knows where lie the remains of that victim of the Reign of Terror. In the cemetery of the church of St. Margaret in the Rue St. Barnard there is a tomb which bears the words "L. XVII, 1785-1795. Attendite et vioete si est dolor sicut dolor meus." Is this the tomb of the lost Dauphin, as that inscription would indicate and as many Parisians believe? Or would the Bourbonists who wished to honor the memory of this King, who never held the throne which was rightfully his, be compelled to visit a cemetery in the town of Hogansburg, New York, and lay their wreaths upon the gravestone which bears the name of Eleazer Williams with the assurance that they were thus honoring the little lost Dauphin?

Although the fate of the lost Dauphin is one of the unsolved riddles of history, certain definite facts in regard to it have been established by the researches of a recent French historian. According to his account, in August, 1792, the Paris Commune, after a dispute with the legislative assembly as to where their royal prisoners were to be quartered, succeeded in getting its own way and decreed that the place of captivity should be the Temple, the palace of the Grand Friar of the Knights Templars. Here were held King Louis XVI, Queen Marie Antonette, Princess Elizabeth (sister of the King), Princess Marie Therese (daughter of the King and Queen and later the Duchesse d'Angouleme), and the Dauphin, Louis Charles. On January 21, 1793, the king was beheaded; later the Queen and the Princess Elizabeth were also sent under the knife, leaving only the Dauphin and his sister prisoners in the Temple.

Before the Queen was executed, however, the Dauphin had been separated from the rest of his family and held a prisoner by himself in another part of the building where he was placed under the care of Antoine Simon, an ignorant shoemaker, and his wife. Simon was to be the young prince's tutor with the special object of teaching him the democratic ideas of the revolution. All that he taught the boy, however, was to sing indecent songs and to talk the rough language of the lower classes. However he was not cruelly treated, as has so often been charged, and enjoyed considerable liberty within the Temple grounds.

On January 19, 1794, Simon suddenly ceased to be the Dauphin's guardian and that night he and his wife left the Temple. It is from this moment that the mystery begins. Heretofore many people had been allowed to see the Dauphin, but from this time on he was kept in close confinement and no one, except the person who attended to his needs, knew anything about the mode of his existence. Within six months the Commune had fallen, but the Temple still held its royal prisoner or, at least, a child who was supposed to be the Dauphin.

The last guardian of the little prisoner, Etienne Alsne, reported that the boy was an imbecile or very much like one and finally on June 8, 1795, this boy died. An autopsy was performed and various persons were shown the corpse. Care was taken to prevent anyone from properly identifying him. Although the boy had been buried as the son of Louis XVI, rumors persisted that the Dauphin was not really dead. It is a plausible theory that the real Prince was taken away from the Temple by Simon and that a substitute was placed there in his stead; that Royalist plotters abducted this substitute in the belief that he was Louis XVII, replacing him with the boy who actually died in the Temple and was buried as the prince, a child who was apparently diseased and an imbecile. If this is true, then the mystery is no nearer solution than ever before, for not long after Simon left the Temple, he was guillotined without revealing what disposition he had made of the real Louis XVII. The Dauphin had simply disappeared and not even the careful researches of this French historian has accounted for his ultimate fate. He is certain that the boy did not die in the Temple but is unable to find any trace of him after his removal by those who hoped to profit thereby but who died before they had the chance to make use of their opportunity.

In the years that followed the disappearance of the real Dauphin and the death of the supposed Prince in the Temple, there came a veritable deluge of claimants to the title of being the real Louis XVII. No less than twenty-five "Lost Dauphins" appeared before French courts from time to time to press their claims and to disturb the peace of mind of the government of France.

The most picturesque perhaps of all the claimants was Charles William Naurendorf, who appeared in Paris in 1833 as the long missing lost Dauphin. He too, had a long list of documents in support of his assumption that he was of royal blood, but when the court heard the evidence this "lost Dauphin" was summarily banished from France. He eventually made his home in Delft, Holland, and died in 1845. So strongly did he impress his claims upon a large group of French royalists that he was buried with great ceremony and over his grave in the Delft cemetery was erected a monument bearing these words. "Here reposes Louis XVII, King of France and Navarre, Charles Louis, Duke of Normandie, born in Versailles, March 27, 1785, died in Delft August 10, 1845."

It is a far cry from the palace of Versailles and the Temple in Paris to the little town of Hogansburg, N. Y., and Green Bay, Wis., yet these two American towns have also been concerned in the mystery of the lost Dauphin. Seventy-seven years ago both Europe and America were agog over the assertion of Rev. Eleazer Williams, an Episcopal missionary among the Indians, that he was the son of Louis XVI, and therefore the lost Dauphin of France. Eleazer Williams was the son of a halfbreed Mohawk Indian chief, Thomas Williams, who was descended from Eunice Williams, the famous Deerfield captive, and was one of the family of thirteen halfbreeds by Thomas Williams' Indian wife, Mary Ann Williams. He grew up among the Mohawks at Caughnawaga, Quebec, but was educated in New England and served brilliantly as the head of a corps of scouts and spies for the Americans in the War of 1812. Later he became a missionary among his father's people, first as a Congregationalist and later as an Episcopalian. When they and other Iroquois tribesmen in New York were being hard pressed by the advancing white settlers, he was instrumental in obtaining lands for them in Wisconsin. At some time during his early career he heard the story of the lost Dauphin and having been told that he resembled the Bourbon Prince, he decided to advance his claims to the honor of being that person. Owing to a scrofulous taint in his family, the bruises and injuries, received while he was a child playing with his Indian playmates, left permanent scars which were later in life increased in size by artificial means. These he claimed to have been the result of the shackles and chains with which he was confined in the Temple.

In 1841 the Prince de Joinville, son of the then reigning King Louis Philippe of France, followed his father's example and paid a visit to America. During a trip on the Great Lakes the Prince found awaiting him at Mackinac a clerical-looking gentleman who asked permission to accompany the Prince's party to Green Bay, Wis. This cleric was Eleazer Williams and soon after the departure of the Prince from Green Bay, Williams gave out the astonishing statement that De Joinville had acknowledged that he (Williams) was Louis XVII, and that the Prince had sought him out in the western wilderness to ask him to renounce his claim to the throne of France. A few years later Williams told his story to Rev. J. H. Hanson who wrote an article "Have We a Bourbon Among Us?" which appeared in the February, 1853, number of Putnam's Monthly. When a copy of this magazine was received in England, where the Prince de Joinville was then living as an exile from France, he immediately repudiated the alleged interview and denounced Williams as an impostor. However, a book by Hanson, "The Lost Prince," which gave a detailed account of Williams' life, and which proved to the satisfaction of the author, at least, that the Mohawk halfbreed missionary was indeed the lost Dauphin, gained for him many adherents.

Although Williams steadfastly maintained that he was the lost Dauphin, nothing ever came of his pretensions and he died August 28, 1858, on the St. Regis reservation near Hogansburg, N. Y. Evidently his adherents were not as steadfast in their belief as were those of Naurendorf, for he was buried with Masonic rites simply as "Brother Eleazer Williams," and the plain monument over his grave at Hogansburg bears not the royal crest of the house of Bourbon, but the Masonic emblem, his name, dates of his birth and death.

Perhaps he has had as much right to the title of the lost Dauphin as any other claimant but history has not yet been convinced that any of the claims are convincing.

Fighting Pellagra

The disease known as "pellagra" was formerly supposed to be caused by a sort of poisoning due to corn or to a fungus growing in spoiled corn, but this has been completely disproved. The reason why the theory was ever set up is that the disease was first studied in southern Europe among people who lived almost exclusively on corn. Pellagra is now believed to be largely, if not entirely, caused by restricted diets which do not supply all the necessary food ingredients, particularly by those which furnish little or no flesh foods, eggs, dairy products, fresh vegetables or fruits. The best way to guard against it is to try to use these foods freely.

Exports Trees to World

In a very remote corner of Holland there is a section of the country that is given exclusively to the growing of trees and shrubs which are shipped to many parts of the world, the greater part coming to the United States. The land is especially adapted for this character of nursery work and the rhododendrons grown here are notably fine specimens. In one field alone there were 10,000 of these plants which were being grown especially for dealers in the United States. There are many other such fields, some being given over to the cultivation of ornamental trees.

This country imports 40,000 glass eyes each year.

Among the clubs, societies and organizations in New York, with peculiar names are the Agoda Achim Magrial Liten Unten Verein, the Bahama Rejuvenating league, the Ceres Sewing circle and the Chaldean Rescue society.

Some of the labor unions have names similarly engaging. There must be something different about the Clothing Sponging Drivers' union, and the unions of the Egg Inspectors, Elite Headwaiters; Examiners, Regraders and Bushelers, Feather Boa Workers, House Shovers, Mineral Water Workers, United Sea Food Workers, Hotel Bellmen, Eccentric Firemen, Delicatessen Clerks and United Umbrella Handle and Stick Makers.

PAY HOMAGE TO THE CAPE; NEW SILK PRINTS ALLURING

THE hour of triumph for the cape has arrived. All fashionable Paris pays homage to the cape this spring.

As to types of capes as created by French couturiers there is no end. Not a single dull moment on their cape program—a thrill with every new creation. From full-length circular to tiny shoulder effects with strange and devious detours along paths of half-cape or one-shoulder devices which are a compromise between a cape and a scarf, thus is the progress of the cape defined.

Not only are capes as a separate item smartly to the fore, but the chief glory of the cape is its alliance with skirt and blouse or one-piece frock to form an ensemble. Some of the ensemble capes are only hip length and very simply made with scarf collar or the new high-collar effect with revers down the front. With a matching skirt, and a silken blouse such an ensemble is adorably youthful. Sometimes the cape is lined with gay silk print of the same sort as that of which the blouse is made. To complete the lightsome spring theme, a scarf of the joyously colorful print is drawn through slots cut in the cloth collar, the long hemstitched ends fluttering to every passing breeze.

A swagger cape ensemble is shown in the picture. It is of French extraction, brought to American soil as an exponent of what's new in fashion. The cape is of pale beige cloth with huge patch pockets of the same material but of a darker tone. The ensemble theme is interpreted in that the skirt matches the pockets. Beige satin crepe exquisitely embroidered forms the blouse.

If any there be who think that gay prints "have had their day," they are very happily mistaken. On the contrary, the mode announces in accents clear, a return engagement for prints. More thrilling, more beauty-inspired than ever are the incoming 1928 prints.

Many of the new prints are already making their appearance in fashion's realm under the title of midseason frocks which breathe the very breath of spring in the freshness of their colorings and patternings.

According to advices from Paris prints will be very popular for wear this spring and summer, fashioned simply but smartly as is the model in the picture. Of course the background of this delectable print is navy, for navy is forespoken as outstanding for the coming months. The white plaited georgette jabot lends a distinguishing touch to the costume.

Perhaps the prints which are creating the greatest sensation at the present moment here in America are those featuring American Indian designs and colorings. Indian pottery, blankets, war paint, feathers and the entire paraphernalia of Indian costume have inspired these striking new patternings. Naturally the colors are pronounced and very effective.

Especial interest is attached to silk prints for spring in that they are contributing so definitely to the development of smart ensembles. Attractive models feature three-quarter length coats, maybe of kasha, of tweed or of popular basket cloth, which are lined with striking printed silks. These are posed over one-piece frocks of the self-same silk as the coat lining. Very exquisite afternoon ensembles use velvet for the coat, preferably black, although pastel tones are being featured for these in the South.

It is expected that the chiffon-floral frocks will be outstanding when summer comes, for the reason that they are even at this moment being worn by fashionables who are spending their winter in the sunny South. These are styled with all the feminine graces of fluttering hemlines, which are charmingly irregular, with myriads of floating streamers, jabots and panels featured in connection with necklines and hiplines, girdles and sleeves.

Kerchief-Scarf Adds to Sports Frock or Jacket

Giving them the air of being quite festive and gay, brightly colored Deauville kerchief-scarfs add dash and verve to white flannel or silk sports frocks or jacket costumes. Sometimes these jaunty silk squares are loosely knotted at one shoulder, and on other occasions they are worn like ascot ties. Solid centers and deep checked, striped, plaided or figured borders are greatly favored.

Let's Profit By Italy's Lesson

SINCE Mussolini has gained power in Italy he has taken steps to destroy all sign of democracy in that country; has taken the privileges of the people and bestowed them upon himself and required that all be in accord with his slightest wish. His latest step in this dictatoral policy was to have his grand Fascist council pass a bill abolishing universal suffrage in Italy. This bill provides that only those who contribute to the progress of the country and those who are useful to the country collectively are to be allowed to vote. It does not require a great amount of imagination to surmise that only members of the Fascist party will be considered as of any value to the nation.

In our own country we are very apt to consider the right of suffrage as an inalienable part of our lives and to give it as little thought as we do the air we breathe. It is well to remember, however, that liberty is the result of eternal vigilance, and that to retain a right it must be maintained by use. Too many Americans are neglecting the right and duty of citizenship. A large proportion of the eligable voters fail to even register.

When the citizens of a free country become lax in their duties, that country is ready for government by a minority or by a dictator. Even now we hear too much criticism of the government by those who never take the trouble to vote. If the government is in the hands of incompetent, the dishonest, the corrupt or the mediocre, it is because the competent, the honest, the upstanding citizens of the country have failed in their duties as citizens. For after all the rght and just are in the majority, and if this majority is not reflected in the government, the good people of the country have only themselves to blame.

Facing the Facts in San Mateo

THE report of the committee which has been investigating the situation which resulted in the shortage of funds in the Burlingame and San Mateo high school district has been filed, and the citizens of that district now have all the information which can be secured concerning this unfortunate affair. The one fact which must now be met, as the citizens of that district have known from the beginning, is how to make up the difference.

There is only one sensible way out. A special tax must be voted for. We have no doubt that such a measure will meet with the usual amount of wailing and gnashing of teeth which always accompanies a situation of this kind, but we believe that the sane and sensible majority will register a strong and earnest vote for the good of all concerned.

The schools must be maintained. To allow a mercenary consideration to result in closing the schools of these fine towns would be a disgrace. No element is more vital to the proper growth and development of a town or a city that its public schools.

The schools of San Mateo county are second to none in the state—they must be kept in this position, even if keeping them there costs money.

Heads You Win

A world-known biologist in Madagascar has devoted a lot of time to studying butterflies. It is not very well known that butterflies do not eat. They do their eating when they are caterpillars. When their wings sprout they live a short but gay life flitting from flower to flower.

This scientific chap has discovered that if you chop off a butterfly's head he will live longer. He has no particular use for his head execept that it enables him to find his way around, because his eyes are attached to it. If it is cut off he becomes less active and not using his energy, he lives longer.

It would be a worth-while experiment for some scientist to cut off a few heads that you know about, wouldn't it? A lot of people in this world of ours are not living, but just ambling along in a sort of painless doze, taking their opinions from the pages of their favorite paper, rarely if ever reading a book, seldom meeting new people. They have settled into a rut, where they do not need heads, except to carry hats on.—Kiwanis Magazine.

GAS RATES LOWERED ALONG THE PENINSULA

Gas consumers located along the peninsula in the San Jose division of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company will receive a substantial reduction in gas rates when new schedules become effective February 27, according to John D. Kuster, manager of the San Jose division who states: "New rates will result in a saving of about $100,000 per year in gas bills of the consumers throughout the San Jose division. This reduction is made possible through a small reduction in the price of fuel oil from which gas is manufactured, supplemented by the voluntary reduction on the part of company. Heretofore the outlying territories where gas mains were extended were sparsely settled, resulting in a small amount of gas being sold with a high delivery cost. With the recent growth of business in these areas and the evident expansion of the territory, the company has applied its lower rate schedules as an inducement to further the usage of gas."

Taxation Biggest Problem in State

Your Grocer, Your Mercantile Dealer May Be Your Tax Collector

By CLEM WHITAKER

SACRAMENTO, February 21 — Your grocer, your haberdasher and your general mercantile dealer may soon be your tax collector as well, if we have correctly analyzed the state taxation trend.

At any rate, taxation is one of the biggest issues confronting California today, according to a canvass of state legislators, and a state sales tax is rapidly being brought to the front in some quarters as the way out of the wilderness.

The first legislative champion of the sales tax has come forward in the person of Assemblyman Roy Bishop of Alameda, who placed his stamp of approval on the commodity tax in reply to a questionnaire sent all members of the State Legislature by Capitol News Bureau.

And Bishop's action follows close on the heels of much talk about the sales tax by such men as State Controller Ray L. Riley, Director of Finance A. R. Heron and Irving Martin, the chairman of Governor Young's special tax commission.

Here is what Assemblyman Bishop has to say on the subject: "I favor the adoption of a general commodity sales tax, if properly worked out to prevent the imposition of double taxation upon our banks, railroads and similar organizations who now contribute heavy sums in taxes and the gasoline tax (another form of sales tax) is taking care of the good roads budget without apparent inconvenience to, or complaint by the taxpayer."

The sales tax, however, has some bitter opponents in addition to a goodly number of enthusiastic backers. Even some of its supporters among them, Director of Finance Heron, see the possibility of merchants taking advantage of the measure to boost prices above the actual amount required by such a law.

Many merchants too, would like to dodge the job of becoming tax collectors for the state. The tax, if adopted, probably would be a levy of about one quarter of one per cent on all general merchandise sales.

The principal argument for the sales tax, incidentally, is that it is "painless". You pay it in small amounts and never receive a tax bill.

The water conservation problem, now under state investigation, was rated along with taxation as an issue of prime importance by the lawmakers who answered the questionnaire. California's proposed "co-ordinated plan" of development, whereby surplus waters of the Sacramento valley would be spread over the San Joaquin valley and southern California, is assuming almost equal importance with the Boulder Canyon project in the minds of the people.

"Crime and punishment" also is forging to the front again as a question of first magnitude, due to the sensational Hickman cases and similar atrocious crimes. Assemblyman E. G. Adams of Livingston is out for further revision of the criminal code to make punishment of the outlaw swifter and more certain, while in the south, Assemblyman A. E. Brook of Redlands, proposes capital punishment for all murderers, whether sane or insane.

Repeal of California's famous three-day hesitation marriage law, which happens to have been the brain child of a bachelor-lawmaker, is advocated by Assemblyman H. E. Dillinger of Placerville. Dillinger will get plenty of suport in this move from the hotel men, the resort proprietors, jewelers, marrying parsons and justices, not to mention the well-known younger generation.

Modern youth may also give a cheer or two when it hears that another solon intends to repeal the law banning high school fraternities, although state educators are not so enthused about the mave to re-legalize secret societies in the schools.

Perhaps one reason Assemblyman T. M. Wright, author of California's "Little Volstead Act", has failed to announce his candidcy for re-election is that his fellow solons refuse to get excited about the prohibition issue. The liquor question has ceased to fig-

Many Prominent Men of the State to Support Hoover

Gov. Young Pronounces Hoover the Logical Candidate

By ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, February 21 — "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party," it became evident today in state circles, for with the coming of a new political springtime, preparations for the presidential Maypoll in California are going an apace

Herbert Hoover's ballot battle cry "I do so" as he entered the Ohio presidential primary this week was greeted by an answering chorus of cheers from local officials.

Led by Governor C. C. Young, a formidable group of state officers have already come out in favor of the candidacy of the Secretary of commerce for president.

Governor Young pronounced him the logical candidate, declaring, "The very fact I was one of those who endorsed Hoover in California, shows that I regard him as the outstanding man for the presidency."

Although the governor does not know the national situation at first hand, he predicts that all the elements in the party will support the Californian in his race for the White House.

Considering the outlook for an uncontested ticket in this state, Young said, -' I am particularly gratified at this unanimity in the party, for my interest in the state and its development is such that I am pleased with the prospects that that development will not be marred by political strife."

Both former Democrats and progressives are among the local Republicans who have combined to support Hoover according to statements just issued, State Director of Public Works Bert B. Meek, for instance, an outstanding supporter of Hram Johnson in the Hoover-Johnson contest a few years ago, is now suporting both, Hoover for president, and Johnson for the senate.

Keith Carlin, formerly a Virginia Democrat and now executive secretary to Governor Young, extolled Hoover as "a man well qualified for the highest office at the command of this nation and one in whom the people can put full trust."

State Controller Ray L. Riley, recently completed a trip through the east hobnobbing with the political who's who, and bases his guess upon his observations then.

Because of the early declaration of Hoover supporters for a pledged delegation from this state, there are faint rumors of an opposition ticket. Former governor, Frank Lowden of Illinois, is the subject of most of these, but the only tangible evidence of an attempt to qualify Lowden came in a query to the secretary of state from San Diego as to the method of qualifying for a place on the ballot

All is not so harmonious within the Democratic ranks ,it appears. The Al Smith faction seems to be on the up and go with a call issued by the State Democratic Committeeman Isadore Dockweiler for a meeting this week to select Smith sponsors.

Apparently the New York governor is going to precipitate the wet and dry into the presidential contest and make it a Democratic issue if not a national one. Smith is frankly running on a platform favoring modification of the prohibition law to allow at least light wines and beer.

Opposition to this program among the Democratic "dries" in this state has developed already although the Anti-saloon League will apparently wage no Democratic fight Dr. A. H. Briggs, state head of the League, conceding the state to Smith, according to reports.

The prospect of a lively fight within the Democratic ranks has increased the comparative numbers of voters affiliated with that party, however, county clerks reporting to Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan, that while registration is very light, some Republicans are "going Democratic" this year.

Big Immirgration of Mexicans Reported

By ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, February 2 — "In the spring a young man's fancy may lightly turn to thoughts of love," but a farmer's fancy is cramped by the "how" of pruning, plowing and picking.

Who is to do the necessary farm work, native sons, Mexican immigrants or darkies from de cotton fields of old Dixieland?

That is the problem confronting the California farmer today, according to A. C. Hardison, former president of the California Farm Bureau, who claims "that the harvest truly in plenteous, but the laborers are few."

Hardison, who says that he represents fully half of the farmers of the state, is now in Washington, D. C., opposing the limitation of immigrant laborers from old Mexico, proposed in the Box Bill pending before Congress.

There are plenty of "ranch hands" it is merely a matter of wages, maintains S. J. Lubin, head of the Sacramento Valley Regional Council, who has given considerable study to agricultural economic problems. "Cheap labor is not always cheap," Lubin insists. "Plentiful Mexican labor is aparently cheap because in the end the farmer does not benefit as much as he would by more skilled workmen well paid, well fed and supplied with adequate living quarters."

Threats to import 20,000 negro laborers from Alabama have been made through the California Development Board if the federal government should restrict Mexican immigration.

An Alabama labor contractor stands ready to supply at least that number of negro workers for $1.00 per day and board, according to F. J. Palomares, manager of the agricultural labor bureau of the development board.

Meanwhile, the Division of Housing and Sanitation of the State Department of Industrial Relations with the co-operation of local officials, has been improving the housing conditions in Mexican labor colonies. The complete rehabilitation of the Mexican sections of San Fernando, La Verne, Del Rey and Fresno has just been completed, arcording to Will J. French, director of the department.

Employers of Mexican labor have been in constant trouble with the State Department because of violations of the Camp Sanitation Act, French states. The shortage of unskilled laborers is blamed on these conditions by the state official. "Where good conditions have been established, there has been no shortage." French says.

About 40 cent of the total number of labor complaints received by the state agencies are from Mexicans, and 65 per cent of these arise in Los Angeles and vicinity, statistics show.

California's Mexican population is increasing by leaps and bounds according to fedeal reports. During the last seven years 339,988 of Mexicans have legally entered the United States and only 25,685 of these have departed. Officials further state it is impossible to determine how many have entered the State of California and the United Stats illegally.

Over 56,440 of these immigants gave California as their intended permanent residence, and only 5,025 have permanetly left the state, according to the commissioner of immigration. This only considers those who gave California as their intended future residence at the port of entry and does not account for the number who may have drifted in from other states.

Mexicans comprise more than 24 per cent of the total entries in the last seven years by the latest federal figures available.

With the exclusion of the Oriental, and the reluctance of the whites to enter the cotton fields of the Imperial Valley or become asparagus cutters or fruit pickers in the north, California's real farm laborers of the future will probably be either the brown immigrants from our southern neighbor or blacks from the south, according to farm leaders.

FARMER MUST EXPECT SURPLUS

Cry of Over-production Due To Improperly Balanced Crops

By CLEM WHITAKER

SACRAMENTO, February 23 — If California farmers are proceeding on the theory that each season's entire crop must be marketed to assure a "good year," they are starting with a false premise.

A substantial surplus, not too great, but sufficient to meet emergency demands, is considered essential in most lines of business and the farmer and fruit grower can not expect to be exceptions to the rule.,

Such is the latest contribution to the marketing controversy now raging in California. And it comes from none other than E. E. Kaufman, federal and state crop reporting expert, who probably knows more about the actual trend in production than any other man in the Capitol.

The farmer must expect a reasonable surplus, Kaufman believes; must anticipate it and not only look for new markets for his crops, but also look for possible by-products of his main business to take up the slack when the season is over.

A good dairyman, Kaufman pointed out, expects his trucks to return to the dairy with a certain number of gallons "over" each day. He must always produce more than the trade actually demands to be sure that he can meet the demand and not turn away business.

Continuous talk of over-production, states Kaufman, may result in California being unprepared to meet the demand when "lean years" come, as they are bound to.

The crop reporting expert singled out as an illustration the fact that many big California newspapers always insist that their agents have a surplus at the end of the day. An agent who "sells out," instead of being complimented, is rebuked. The newspaper owner insists it is of first importance to have papers for sale to meet every demand, even though they must take some loss on "left-overs."

And G. H. Hecke, director of the State Department of Agriculture, contributes to the marketing discussion the assertion that California is not producing too much, but rather too little.

The cry of over-production, he insists, results from the fact that our crops are not properly balanced. We are still far short of satisfying the demand in many products, but have over-produced on a few favorite crops, according to Hecke.

"If the farmers would only choose carefully from the 150 commercial farm commodities produced in this state, instead of all crowding heavily on the highly perishable fruit end of the market," asid Hecke, "high prices and ready markets would result."

We are long on peaches and short on steaks. Hecke insists. Swinging the lariat on the open range is one certain method of ropping the shy goddess of fortune. Again, we produce the peaches, but not the cream—at least, not in sufficient quantity.

"Our farming industry is not well balanced," declared the agricultural chief, "despite the fact that no other state in the Union aproaches us in diversity of production. The major part of our crops is of a highly perishable nature, for which markets must be found ohtside of California.

"Livestock and dairy products, for which ready markets exist within the state, are not being produced to meet full market requirements here. Our increasing population consumes more butter, for example, than California dairy men supply."

Art Exhibit At School Attracts Attention

An Art exhibit of about 150 fine masterpieces, representing the French, Italian, Flemish, English, Dutch, Spanish, German and American schools will be held at Sequoia March 12 to 16. A small admission charge will be made, the proceeds being used for the purpose of purchasing pictures for the school. The exhibit will also tend to increase art appreciation in the school and community.

Hope Springs Eternal As Shown by Verse

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, February 23 — Penning the proverbial hope, even in the shadow of the impending gallows, one of the convicts on trial for his life for the killing of Guard Ray Singleton in the Thanksgiving Day riot at Folsom Prison, wrote in defense " of the the men whom God Forgot."

"This old world seems all against us,
But boys, it's not the end,
For the clouds will some day brighten
If one just fails to bend!

You think we are hardened?
And are a sinful lot?
But in our hearts you all could find
A little tender spot."

Referring bitterly to the betrayal of five of them by the sixth defendant, Albert M. Stewart; who turned state's evidence:

"Some men shift the burden quickly,
They scheme, and sneak and lie
Like snakes they are, they hunt their holes,
And leave us out to die.

So grin and face this great old world,
And never say that you're down
We are men whom God forgot,
But we smile though fortune frown."

1927 Plates Will Not Get You By Any Longer

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, February 23 — "Stop, look and pay," is the new traffic order issued by Frank G. Snook, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles applicable to all who were "too late under the wire" in securing their 1928 license plates.

"The 1927 license plates can not get by any longer," Snook declared. "All traffic officers have order to stop every car with old plates."

Plates now cost double to those who did not shop early.

Improvement Planned For Atherton Avenue

Bids for the repair and the construction of shoulders along Atherton avenue in Atherton were opened at the meeting of the board of trustees of that city Tuesday. Three bids were received. The bidders were the Peninsula Paving Co., O. G. Ritchie and W. A. Dontonville.

After opening the bids the board decided to lay the matter over for a week and give it further consideration, as all bids received were higher than had been expected.

THE PUBLIC AND CANCER

By Samuel Zielonka, M. D.
Cincinnati, Ohio

Member Gorgas Memorial

Not so many years ago the term tumor filled us with awe and apprehension, and the individual so afflicted put off—often too long—consulting his physician for fear of being told that the existent condition was a cancer. However, thanks to the more efficient and scientific methods of diagnosis and attack now available, and the campaign of education among the public at large, prevention of the more serious consequences and an earlier diagnosis and cure are now offered to those presenting themselves with abnormal growths or tumors.

We are now living in an age of more scientific enlightenment. Education with its consequences and results, particularly with our improved mode of living, has called the attention of the masses to the why and wherefore of many tumors or growths or that some thing which we know, or at least feel, is not normal. All of us dread the existence of cancer. We are even told that this condition is increasing from year to year. But is this in reality true? May it not be partly due to the fact that our more enlightened civilization is driving and urging us, purely from the standpoint of self-preservation and commonsense, to consult at the earliest possible moment competent medical advice as to the nature of our fears and the proper correction of the same? Do we not owe it to our family, our friends, and ourselves to investigate, and early investigation is advisable, each and every lump which we may have discovered?

The truth is, that the majority of lumps are not cancer but may be potential sources or starting points for more troublesome or more serious lesions. If you have unexpectedly discovered a lump, whether it be in the scalp, skin, breast or any other place, lay aside your bashfulness and vanity, and seek proper medical advice at the earliest possible moment. Have yourself examined and abide by such competent advice. Remember, prophylaxis and prevention here play a very major role. With your assistance and co-operation, your fears will be quickly allayed, and you will have given yourself the benefit of advice to which you are justly entitled and of which you should and must avail yourself. Only from such a common sense standpoint as is being so well fostered by the Gorgas Memorial, can we hope to add useful and comfortable years to our life and thus set an example for others to follow. Co-operation of the public is absolutely vital and essential if prophylaxs and prevention of future pain and suffering are to be achieved.

IODINE IN GOITRE

By J. C. Moore, M. D.
Seattle, Wash.

Member Gorgas Memorial

Iodine has long been used as a remedy in the treatment of goitre. Its action has been studied in each type so that now physicians know which type will be benefited and which will not be benefited by the use of iodine.

The pubicity necessary to educate the public in the use of iodine for the prevention of goitre in children has resulted in a misapprehension of its proper use. Many people think that they can use it indiscriminately as a cure and, as a result many have taken iodine of their own volition. Many serious illnesses have resulted because, in the type of goitre from which the patient was suffering, iodine was not indicated and the use of iodine, even in small amounts, in that particular type of goitre made the patient worse. For this reason it is far better to prescribe iodine in doses suitable for the prevention of goitre in children and not to prescribe it wholesale.

Iodine is put up in a very palatable form, combined with chocolate so that children take it as readily as if it were chocolate candy. One of these tablets once a week will prevent the development of goitre in a child if started at the age of five and continued until the age of sixteen. It will also result in a cure of some goitres in children, but as a rule, the treatment will often be indicated, such as thyroid extract.

Children who have well-developed goitres should be examined so that the case may be correctly diagnosed and suitable treatment given. Every expectant mother living in a known goitre district, should receive small doses of iodine during her period of gestation, in order to protect both herself and her unborn child. Adults who have goitres should never take iodine except under proper orders.

In localities where goitres have existed for several generations, the offspring develop a form of degeneration called 'Cretinism." Such children never develop physically or mentally and in countries such as Switzerland, where goitre has long been prevalent, the Cretins have become a serious economic problem, as they can neither support nor in any way care for themselves but are provided for in numerous public institutons scattered through the republic. Cretinism is rare in the United States but is increasing and, unless we take measures to prevent goitre in our children, we will eventually have a condition similar to that of Switzerland.

IDLE ISLAND

By ETHEL HUESTON

He had brought snowshoes for her, along with an invitation from the Captain and Gram for her to come to the Big House until the snow was over. But Gay did not wish to leave. Now that Rand had come, the beauty of the snowstorm was increased a hundredfold. At his urging, however, she went up to put on stout boots and knickers, for a short run through the woods on snowshoes. Rand helped her through the window and slipped the clumsy shoes over her boots showing her how best to plod along in them.

Gay floundered clumsily at first, but finally, with Rand holding he. hand, they set off into the woodland. There was no breath of wind. The air was clean, cold, but not stinging. It seemed to her that the snow that touched her lips tasted of salt. Constantly she cried out with delight, at the festooning of the trees, the draping of the rocks, and on the sea-side, the great caves of ice and snow which glistened and shone like jeweled castles towered and turreted. Never had she seen the water so dark a blue, so cold.

Tears came to her eyes, tears of wonder at the beauty of the snow-white island, and she stumbled and fell, laughing. Rand helped her up and saw the tears that glistened on her red cheeks.

"You have hurt yourself!"

"No." She put her arms around him, looking anxiously into his eyes, eager that he should understand. "It is because it is so beautiful. Doesn't it make all the little things in the world seem petty, and foolish, and not worth struggling about?"

Rand kissed the tears from her cheeks. "I knew you would feel it. It always gives me an idea it must be sort of pleasant to be dead."

"Oh, no. They cannot see it."

"No, but I dare say it feels as good as it looks. Are you happy, Gay?"

"I never knew what a really happy moment was until—just now. I am laughing for joy, I am weeping for joy, I am adoring you for the same reason."

Now and then a small scared rabbit stumbled through the snow-laden brushwood, scurried quickly to cover. A snow-bird chirped anxiously on a burdened bough. Once in a while, loosened by the sun, a little shower of snow pelted them.

"It's great fun being in love with you, Rand," she said. "It seems to give me a sort of mortgage on all the outside world."

When they had returned again to the window on the valley-side, Rand helped her up and unslung the snow-shoes from her feet.

She put her hands on his shoulders. "Rand, I wish it could go on forever."

"Snowing?"

"No. This. Having you like this, loving you like this, being with you like this." She drew him close to her, and held him tightly with her arms. "All of it. I love it. I never knew what it was to be so happy."

Rand kissed her, their cold lips warming to the caress. But his dark eyes were very dark indeed beneath the long lashes, and his smile was a little stern when he said:

"Would it be as dear, I wonder, if it were going to last forever? Or isn't it all the sweeter because it is just for a year?"

Gay held him closer. She did not answer.

"Because you know, beloved," he said, and his smile was ready now, though his eyes were clouded dark, "I am everything in God's world that you thoroughly do not like."

"Yes. And the one thing in it that I love with my whole heart," she whispered.

"Well, I ought to be satisfied with that," he said cheerfully.

"And so ought I," said Gay. But she was not.

CHAPTER X

In the early evening the snow began to fall again heavily, and the skies seemed fairly bursting with the weight of it. Rand came once more to the window, and swung up sitting on the sill, feet dangling into the snow, as he urged her again to come to the Big House until it was over. But Gay guarded jealously all the little secret intimate joys of her island life. She felt that she would not willingly exchange one month of common luxurious living for the joy of greeting him like this in the pelting snow at her window-sill.

And as they both thought of it at once, they looked at themselves, considering their situation, and burst into merry laughter, for he, in his heavy outdoor garb, sat strumming his feet in the snow, while she beside him, turned satin slippers to the warmth of the cheerful room, and great flakes fell upon them both alike.

"Oh, never," she cried. "I wouldn't give up a minute like this. It is such fun to find you in odd and unexpected moments."

Rand picked a great flake from her hair, and kissed it as it melted.

"You're such a plucky little devil," he said admiringly. "And for a city girl, too. Do they teach you bravery in Greenwich Village? Is courage for sale in the Broadway shops? I don't know a native state-of-Maine girl who would stay here alone in a snow storm."

"Oh, fools rush in," she quoted lightly. "I crave experience. I have never been snowbound. And it is so sweet having you risk the storming elements to see me."

"Now if we were married," he said, "we could be snowed in together, and the rest of the world snowed out—for all the rest of our lives."

Gay's arm tightened about his shoulder. When she spoke, her voice, although she strove to make it light, was husky. "Not for the rest of our lives. The spring would bring a thaw."

"And we'd fight, wouldn't we? Over who should shovel the snow? I'd say, Wife, dear,'"—and then, as Gay flushed, he repeated it, teasingly—"'Wife, dear, you believe in work, you adore work, you worship work, therefore you shovel the snow.'"

Gay's warm lips silenced his mocking. Then she said, "Run along to thy feather bed, thou sluggard. Sleep, drowse and be lazy, for tomorrow you shovel my snow."

"But when you are snowbound—lonely, alone—remember what I told you, we might be snowbound together." And then he shot off suddenly into the storm, and Gay closed the window, smiling at it, merely because Rand had sat there. For her joy in his presence was an unceasing marvel to her.

All night long the snow fell, and whenever Gay turned and wakened she could hear the breathless kissing of flake on flake. And when morning dawned she was snowbound indeed. All her lower windows were blinded with it. Her piazza was solidly banked.

And it was Thanksgiving. They had planned for a party dinner at the Captain's, Alice Andover, Auntalmiry and Gay as guests, and after dinner, Rand and the Budlong boys had arranged to take the girls coasting. Now it was Thanksgiving—no dinner, no party, no Rand. It was a disconsolate Gay who wandered moping around the pretty house, from room to room.

"Thanksgiving, brrr! Not a thing in the world to be thankful for—until the snow melts—and Rand comes."

She had no hope of getting out of her prison that day. The entire valley was plunged in snow. The Apple Tree was just a low white roof showing in a high white plain.

It was noon when she heard voices beside the pine tree that stood at her porch. She ran to the window of her bedroom and looked down. Rand and the Budlong boys were there. They had ropes, and a short ladder, and a basket. No need of a ladder to reach to the branches of the pine, for its lower branches were buried and Rand pulled himself up easily into the tree, while the boys below raised a long plank, steadied it against the tree, raised and shoved it slowly up to him. And wedging it firmly against the branches, Rand shoved it toward her, slowly, and at the end with a little push that lodged it upon her sill.

"I've come for Thanksgiving dinner," he said pleasantly, as though entering a formal reception room to a formal hostess.

"There's nothing to eat—but canned things."

"So I thought. I brought my own."

And then Rand was up on the plank, and slowly, hand over hand, he inched his way out and toward the sill, a distance from the tree but a scant two feet, and Gay's hands caught him when he landed.

Then the boys tossed him the end of a rope, and the heavy basket was raised.

"You needn't come back for me," he called. "I'll slide down into the snow. Won't hurt me. Thanks, boys. So long."

"You darling," Gay said. "I had no idea you would come. I said it was a terrible Thanksgiving, and I had nothing in the world to be grateful for, and I said the snow was hideous. Fancy that!"

All her life, Gay looked back to that as a perfect day. They were like two children in their gaiety, in their love. They giggled joyously over unpacking the basket the Captain's wife had filled for them. There was turkey, yes, with dressing, and cranberry sauce, and a little jar of gravy Pickles, fruit cake, pie.

"It is Thanksgiving," Gay said solemnly. "It is Thanksgiving. You are my Thanksgiving, Rand, I am very grateful to you."

After dinner they pulled up the divan before the fireplace, and sat together, very close, and Rand smoked while Gay, both arms about him, stroked his hair, ran slender tensing fingers under his collar, touched gently the healing scar on his forehead.

"I never expected to be so much in love," she said happily.

"Don't you ever expect to be more in love than this?"

"No, no. Oh, no. I hope not. I should die of it." Then she added slowly, "Rand, you think I do not really love you. You think it is sort of half-fun, half-thrill—sort of a fly-by-night affair, don't you?"

"I think you love me as much as you can, perhaps. But you and I—we are alike—we cannot love—love greatly. Too selfish. You think too much of getting things done. I think too much of my own pleasure. We can't love greatly because we always put ourselves first."

"I love you greatly," she said indignantly. "Too greatly. So greatly I cannot eat, sleep or work for thinking of you."

"That's not love. That's—sensation. How long do you think that sort of thing will last? It will be over in a year—if it endures so long."

"Do you honestly think that, Rand? That this beautiful feeling I have for you will last only a year?"

"How long does it usually last with you? How long did it last the last time?"

"Oh, Rand. It was never like this, never."

"It never is, while it lasts. And when it comes again—it is never like this, either."

Gay stirred restlessly in his arms. "I don't believe it. It will last. It has the feeling of—eternity itself—about it."

They were silent for a while.

"Gay," he said seriously, "this is something you don't know. The only way to hold a treasured thing is—by treasuring it. Keeping it. Guarding it. Sacrificing for it. A treasure has to be treasured—or pouf—tinsel, paste, the gold just gilded. An untreasured treasure is worth nothing. You don't realize that."

"Do you, Rand, do you realize it?"

"Too well I do." He laughed. "I realize it well enough but— What? My birthright for a mess of pottage? Never."

"Oh, Rand! Am I a mess of pottage?"

"Yes, you are one of the fleshpots of Egypt," he said, laughing. "The dearest—the sweetest—the most savory fleshpot— And I should trudge right off in the desert and wash my hands of you. But I think," and he paused to kiss her, "I think I'll stick around a while."

* * * * * * *

It was the fifteenth of December, when island, bay and sea were finally enwrapped in the tight cold bands of winter, that Auntalmiry climbed the snow-covered slope to Gay's door. She said she had come for a long talk, a nice cozy afternoon. She still wore her mantle of joyous excitement, of laughter, but beneath it, she was tired, a little old woman of seventy-six years, a heavy weight of time for one so slight.

They had tea, they sewed, they talked. Gay told her many little bits of island gossip which she had from Rand. When she mentioned Alice Andover at last, Auntalmiry sparkled.

"A good woman," she said warmly. "I've never known a better, for all her administrating. My dear, can you keep a secret? Yes, I know you can. Dearie, I'm going to have a Christmas party, after all."

And then, flushing with excitement, sparkling youthfully, she told Gay all about it. She could not bear to give it up, she would rather die than give it up, she thought indeed she would die if she must give it up. But she was curiously conscientious. What was given to her, she accepted cheerfully. But what was denied, she had no right to take. They had put a limit on her, and his limit she was bound in honor to respect. Ah, but there were a thousand devious little ways to circumvent a limit, to stretch it, honorably and fairly.

She was old, her appetite was small, her wants modest, and both appetite and wants could be stinted a little. Not that she called it stinting! She called it "handling."

What did she want, at her age, with all those glasses and jars of fine, rich, home-made jellies and fruits? Why, it was sheer extravagance, wasting such fineness on a little old shriveled-up woman like Auntalmiry—extravagance, no less. So she had taken it, all her precious store, a little at a time, over to town and sold it. Indeed the shops were very glad to get such quality, and gave her a good price for it, cash.

And she had other things, too, things she never used, things that were just vanity for an old woman to keep in a drawer, and look at sometimes, and fondle lovingly, and show off to admiring visitors, fine bits of lace, silken scarfs, delicate embroideries, old gold pins, gifts that had been brought to her by friends, people who loved her, returning from trips to the city and tours abroad, from the Orient, from Italy, Paris. Why should she keep those delicate and lovely things just because she loved to look at them? Sheer vanity. And so she sold them, sold them all. No one would ever know. Gay wouldn't tell.

And then she acknowledged her need of Gay. The Apple Tree was so small, so crowded. Gay had offered the use of the Lone Pine for a party. Had she made the offer in good faith?

"Because," she said, "there's no room to dance in the Apple Tree."

Oh, yes, they danced at Auntalmiry's party. It began at five o'clock, the party for the sake of the babies, and the smaller children, of whom there seemed to be disproportionately many. So it was a baby's party first, when the tree was lighted, and the children danced about it with their candies and nuts and fruits and gifts, and there was a noisy champing Santa Claus.

And then, very early, for the snow was always heavy and the night cold, the parents trundled the babies away home to bed, and the others stayed on and danced. "Danced," Auntalmiry said joyously, "until two, three, and last year, until four o'clock in the morning. Think of it, until four—"

"I suppose you went on to bed and couldn't sleep for the noise—"

"I! Go to bed! Indeed I didn't. I stayed up, and I danced a little myself. I danced with Rand three times. Oh, I had a little cold afterward—not much—I was in bed a while. I'll never hear the last of that silly little cold. I think last year was the nicest party of all—except the very first one—fifty years ago—when Buddy, my son, was born. I told you about that. He would be older than you—fifty years." She smiled at Gay. "Do you know what I think? I think Buddy may be that Unknown Soldier down in Washington. I have thought so from the first. He would be in the war, I know, he was so daring, he loved a fight. Some time—maybe next year—I shall do without the Christmas party, and instead I shall go down to Washington, and stand there, and think it is Buddy. Poor Buddy! He always thought right, he always meant right. But things always went wrong. That kind of a boy, heart full of impulse, hands full of mischief, head full of nonsense. Fifty years."

Then Gay put away all her work and gave up the rest of the time to getting ready for Christmas.

Recalling Early Days

With plenty of patience, paper and a pencil, it is possible for you to remember what happened when you were six months old, asserts Dr. E. Pickworth Farrow, English psychologist, in Popular Science Monthly. For periods of one or two hours at a time, he says, write down any and every thought which occurs to you. Repeat the process several times. Then, as memories of recent happenings gradually are "worked off" on paper, you will go back to recollections of your early life.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

A list of gifts totalling $13,000 in cash or material of estimable value, and many other gifts whose value cannot readily be quoted, were accepted by the Board of Regents of the University of California at their annual meeting on the campus of the University at Los Angeles, Tuesday morning, February 14.

At a mass meeting of large landholders at Murphy's, Calaveras county, last week agreement was reached to establish a 40,000 game refuge in Calaveras and Toulumme counties, including part of Stanislaus National Forest. Boundaries will be fixed within two weeks and the project placed before the State Fish and Game Commissioner and the Legislature. It will be asked that the refuge be closed for ten years.

California headquarters of the American Legion has just received the silver trophy given by the late Frederic W. Galbraith, Jr., national commander at the time of his death, to the state recording the greatest number of "man-miles" in attendance at the national legion convention. California chalked up 7,700,000 "man-miles" in sending 1,136 delegates to the Paris convention last fall. The Galbraith cup, a permanent trophy, also came to California in 1923.

The California Newspaper Publishers' Association will hold its annual convention in 1929 in Sacramento. Word that the association has accepted the invitation of the Sacramento Tourist and Convention Bureau to hold its next session at Sacramento was contained in a telegram received by L. W. Hayes, manager of the convention bureau. The newspaper publishers' association will meet at Sacramento in January with approximately 400 publishers from all parts of the state in attendance.

Should laws excluding Mexican labor from the United States be enacted by Congress, 20,000 negroes from the Southern States will come to California immediately to work in fields and orchards at $1 a day. Information to this effect was received last week by the Agricultural Labor Bureau of the San Joaquin Valley, according to announcement from the California Development Association.

The hand of the law was laid upon a grand total of 135,000 California motorists during 1927, they being fined, jailed or otherwise punished for violations of the State motor vehicle act. The State motor vehicle department announces that actual reports on violations filed with the department number 85,000. It is estimated there are at least 50,000 additional violations which judges of California have failed to report.

Agricultural interests in the San Bernardino Valley are evidencing interest in the first intensive reforestation program ever attempted in the San Bernardino mountains, during which 15,000 young pines will be transplanted along the Rim-of-the-World this month. The trees will be planted under direction of S. A. Nash-Boulden, Supervisor of the San Bernardino National Forest, and County Forester Roy M. Tuttle, in territory burned over in 1922.

With several plans of proceedure suggested for Federal acquisition of private timber lands inside the Yosemite National Park, Governor C. C Young, it was announced last week, has been asked to use his influence in preventing any action which will tend to reduce the size of the park. Approximately 4,000 acres are said to be privately owned within the park, and it is generally agreed that these lands should be obtained by the government, according to Charles A. Whitmore, the governor's private secretary, who characterizes private holdings inside national parks as "a thorn in the side of park administration."

San Francisco and Los Angeles counties will receive more than one-third of the 1927 State motor vehicle fees for use in maintenance of county highways, it was announced a few days ago by the State Division of Motor Vehicles. Los Angeles will receive $1,500,610.12 on the basis of vehicle registrations for the last year the announcement said, and $298,660.12 will go to San Francisco. The state law provides that half the total motor vehicle fees shall go to the State Highway Commission and half to the county government for highway upkeep and repair. The announcement stated that Los Angeles registered 689,902 vehicles during 1927, an increase of 42,995 over the previous year. San Francisco registered 135,729 against 7,489. Though complete state totals are not yet available it was stated Alameda county will receive an apportionment of $269,254.13, on 126,101 vehicle registrations.

The Lassen Volcanic National Park ultimately is to become the tourist mecca of northern California is the prediction made at Sacramento following announcement that Congressman H. L. Engelbright had succeeded in getting into the new national park program an appropriation of $521,000. This amount is for completion of the present loop road now under construction and for construction of a road from the Werner valley entrance to some point on the main loop road between Summit lake and lower Kings Creek Meadows.

Operating and construction expenditures in the State of California of the Great Western Power Company, the San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation, and the Midland Counties Public Service Corporation will total $20,447,870 during 1928. This is according to the budget announced recently by A. Emory Wilson, vice president and general manager of the three public utilities. New construction throughout the territory served by these systems, which extends from the Feather River in the north into Santa Barbara County in the south, will cost $12,485,137.

Bids for the new $100,000 machinery exhibit building at the State Fair will be opened March 9 at 2 o'clock in the office of George B. McDougal, state architect, he announces. Work will begin on the structure within 30 days so that it may be ready for occupancy by the time of the 1928 fair next September. The new building, one-story in height, will have a frontage of about 280 feet and a length of 385 feet.

Reports that Francis Drake, editor of a Los Angeles labor publication, is being backed by Southern California friends for appointment to the State industrial accident commission were being circulated in political circles at the Capitol last week. The position for which Drake was mentioned is that of Commissioner J. E. Olmsted of Petaluma who has indicated to Governor Young his desire to resign from the State service at the executive's convenience.

As a reflection of the building and the community progress that follows the establishment of a university, plans for another impressive structure adjacent to the Westwood campus of the University of California at Los Angeles have just been announced by southern California Masonic officials. The proposed building is to cost $250,000 and will be used by students affiliated with the Masonic order or whose parents are so affiliated, as a clubhouse and social center. Construction of the University buildings on the campus proper is well under way.

Members of the philosophy department of the University of California at Los Angeles are attempting to make a complete collection of the works of the Dr. Josiah Royce, graduate of the University, one of the most eminent philosophers America has ever known, and recently pronounced one of California's four greatest men.

The body of a man believed to be one of the missing transpacific Dole flyers was washed ashore near Ventura last week. The only identification possible was bits of clothing, identified as that of the Navy, clinging to the body which gave evidence of having been in deep salt water for some time. The only naval aviator unaccounted for in the Dole flight was Lieut. Vilas R. Knope of San Diego. He was the navigator of the ill-fated Miss Doran, which carried John A. Pedlar as pilot and Miss Mildred Doran as a passenger. Pedlar and Miss Doran were from Flint, Mich.

Plans for the second annual observance of Narcotic Education Week, February 22-29, as a means of bringing home to the people of America the growing dangers of the narcotic drug evil were announced last week at the office of Governor C. C. Young. The educational program is to be emphasized through the public schools, motion pictures, the press and the radio in all parts of the country, according to arrangements being made by the world conference on narcotic education.

Public hearings, starting in Sacramento on March 1st, will be held by the state tax commission under a plan adopted at a meeting of the commission in San Francisco last week. Meetings will also be held in San Francisco and Los Angeles, in the bay city on March 6th and in the south on March 13th. All individuals and organizations interested in the commission's investigation of the taxation and revenue system of the state government are invited to air their opinions at the hearings. Robert M. Haig, expert of the commission, who arrived in California from New York a few days ago, will spend the rest of the month getting acquainted with California conditions.

William Edward Hickman's kidnaping and murder of little Marion Parker cost the City and County of Los Angeles $86,850, it was disclosed a few days ago in conservative estimates by officials. And it is costing $400 each day for trial of Hickman and Welby Hunt for the murder of C. Ivy Thoms. This is more than $1 for every minute of the court day. The city's estimate cost for the search for "The Fox" and his capture amounts to approximately $61,850. The county's cost up to the time Hickman was convicted and sentenced to hang was approximately $25,000.

California's State printing plant saved the taxpayers $344,991.53 in 1927 in the publication alone of elementary school free text books. Additional savings of thousands of dollars were made in printing jobs for state departments. These figures, compiled by State Printer Carroll Smith, last week were presented to Governor C. C. Young as proof of the value of the state plant in turning out high class work at a cost greatly under privately owned printing shops. The year's output of text books was 1,409,275 volumes, which were published at a total cost f.o.b. pupil, including printing cost plus 5 per cent royalty, 10 per cent board of education overhead for distribution, of $461,719.74. To have had the books published in a private plant would have cost the state $806,711.27, or an excess of $344,991.53 over the state plant figures.

The State Highway Commission has been directed by B. B. Meek, chief of the department of public works, to make an exhaustive investigation and report on toll bridges in California. The report will be made in compliance with the requirements of an act adopted by the 1927 Legislature for a report of the 1929 body with recommendations toward the State taking over the bridges and financing their amortization. Charles E. Andrews, engineer of the commission, will be in charge of the structural end of the investigation.

A drive is to be launched immediately by the State Real Estate Department on more than 30,000 realty brokers and salesmen who are operating in California without a 1928 license, T. A. Kelly, chief deputy commissioner, announced last week. Violators of the law will be prosecuted, he said. In order to speed the check-up on the thousands of operators who have neglected to renew their annual license, Kelly announced that eight additional deputies will be placed in service, two each to work out of Sacramento, Fresno, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

POULTRY FACTS

FEEDING FLOCK OF LAYING HENS

The New Hampshire station gives the following feeding recommendations for laying hens, formulated at the 1927 conference of representatives of New England agricultural colleges:

Mash formula: 200 pounds course yellow corn meal, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds middlings, preferably white; 100 pounds oat products (see paragraph 3); 25 pounds meat scraps, not less than 50 per cent protein; 25 pounds fish scraps, not less than 45 per cent protein; 25 pounds steamed bone meal; 25 pounds dried milk; 5 pounds common salt.

Grain formula: 200 pounds whole corn; 100 pounds wheat; 100 pounds oats.

1. That dry mash be kept before the birds constantly in hoppers or troughs that can be and are kept clean and free from litter, dirt and filth. That all hard grains be fed in similar hoppers or troughs. The amount will vary with the breed, the rate of production, the weather, and possibly other factors, but there is a growing tendency among poultrymen to feed grain more liberally.

2. Whole corn is recommended because there are certain vitamine losses in cracking, and furthermore the feeder is better able to check up on quality. This presupposes that chicks have been taught to eat whole corn on the range, or before being installed in the laying house.

3. Oats should be omitted from the scratch mixture when fed germinated. The term "oat products" in the mash formula includes oat flour, ground oatmeal or ground 40-42 oats. All are used pound for pound.

4. Cod liver oil is a valuable supplement that ought to be added to the ration during the winter months at the rate of one pint per 100 pounds of feed or nearly one quart per 100 hens per week or one-fourth pint per 100 hens per day. It should be fed the year around to hens kept in confinement.

Ganders Are Drawback in the Geese Business

Geese naturally mate in pairs. Sometimes you can force upon a gander more than one mate. Sometimes you cannot. I should say that the average you would have to keep would be two ganders to three and possibly four geese. That is one of the drawbacks of the geese business, says a writer in The Farmer. You have to keep too many unproductive males. The productive females do not lay a great number of eggs, perhaps 30 to 35, and unless some pains is taken in feeding them the eggs do not hatch very well.

If you have plenty of roughage, however, they can be rather cheaply fed. Short cuttings of alfalfa or clover hay may consist of one-third of the bulk of their feed. The other two thirds should consist of corn meal, wheat bran, wheat middlings. They should have a small amount of animal matter. This feed might be mixed with skim milk or buttermilk or add about 5 per cent of meat scraps or tankage to it. You should have fine sand, say about one pound in 100 pounds of soft feed. This soft feed should be fed quite wet. They might have a little whole corn at night, but not a great deal. Too much will make them so fat by spring that the geese eggs will not be fertile.

Changing Breed Doesn't Help Egg Production

Unfortunately for a great many people the idea prevails that the only way to get more eggs is to change the breed or variety of birds kept. Merely changing from one breed of birds to another is not going to make any improvement in results, unless some one has previously done some constructive breeding with the particular strain of birds selected. Some very creditable records have been made by individual cows in various breeds, and we also know that individual hens in different breeds of poultry have made some very high egg-production records.

Contagious Roup

Contagious roup is a very easy disease to recognize, starting usually like simple cold, with a thin, watery discharge from the nose and eyes. This secretion has a peculiar, offensive odor. Inflammation sets into the nasal passages, eyes and spaces just below the eyeballs. Birds often cough and sneeze and breathing becomes noisy. If nasal passages become blocked the birds breathe through their mouths. The birds soon lose their appetite and become depressed.

Prevent Toe Picking

When boxes of day-old chicks arrive do not open them and allow the chicks to see each other very long. They will be hungry and with no feed in the box they may quickly form the toe-picking habit. This seldom happens when the chicks are placed in the brooder house where the litter and the feed hopper keeps them busy. Idleness is the foundation of bad habits in poultry of all ages. The busy hen on the range seldom eats eggs or pulls feathers from her flock mates.

All-Mash Ration

The chief difficulties observed with an all-mash ration have been on account of insufficient mash hopper space, these hoppers not having been kept full; and where own grains have been used, especially low-quality corn. No grain is fed with the all-mash ration until the chicks are eight to twelve weeks of age, as the addition of grain usually has the tendency to reduce the rate of growth and does not particularly increase the total feed consumed by the chicks.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Liberty island, site of the Statue of Liberty, was the scene of an interesting patriotic spectacle when the Boy Scout foundation, in co-operation with the army, the navy, the French consulate general and patriotic and scientific societies, celebrated the one hundred fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the treaty of alliance with France in 1778. "Benjamin Franklin" placed a huge wreath at the foot of the statue.

Declarer's Play of No Trump

THE following deal illustrates ducking:

	♠—8, 7, 6 ♡—K, 8, 7, 6, 5 ◇—9, 5 ♣—6, 3, 2
♠—10, 2 ♡—Q, 10 ◇—A, J, 8, 4, 3 ♣—Q, 8, 7, 5	W N E S	♠—A, Q, 9, 5, 3 ♡—J, 9, 2 ◇—10, 6 ♣—J, 10, 4
	♠—K, J, 4 ♡—A, 4, 3 ◇—K, Q, 7, 2 ♣—A, K, 9

South deals and bids one no trump, as he has a particularly good hand with all four suits protected and four and a half quick tricks. All pass and south becomes the declarer.

West leads his fourth best diamond, the four. Dummy is spread on the table and declarer looks over the two hands. The prospect is not very good. He can see two tricks in each of the three suits, hearts, diamonds and clubs; but his spades are very doubtful. His only hope of game is in the heart suit and the only way to establish and make dummy's small hearts is by the play called "ducking" which he decides to try.

The deal is played as follows:

	W	N	E	S
1	D4	D5	D10	DK
2	H10	H5	H2	HA
3	HQ	H6	H9	H3
4	DA	D9	D6	D2
5	DJ	C2	C4	DQ
6	S2	HK	HJ	H4
7	C5	H8	S3	D7
8	S10	H7	C10	C9
9	C7	C6	CJ	CA
10	C8	C3	S6	CK
11	D3	S6	SA	SK
12	D8	S7	SQ	S4
13	CQ	S8	S9	SJ

Declarer makes three odd tricks.

Declarer ducks the third trick by playing low in dummy in order to save his King to take the third round of hearts and thus make dummy's remaining cards in the suit. At trick 9 he considers the advisability of leading a spade but decides against it because West may hold the Ace; in which case game would be lost because of West's two good diamonds. At trick 11 declarer knew that West did not have any spades because he could place him with the Queen of clubs and two diamonds; therefore by leading the King of Spades declarer with quite sure to get one more trick.

The following deal illustrates the use of the informatory double in the bidding; and the choice of opening lead and the use of the echo in the play:

	♠—A, 10, 9, 3 ♡—J, 3 ◇—A, K, 8 ♣—Q, J, 10, 5
♠—8, 4 ♡—K, Q, 10, 9, 8, 5 ◇—Q, 3 ♣—A, K, 8	W N E S	♠—Q, 6, 2 ♡—7, 6, 4, 2 ◇—10, 6, 4, 2 ♣—7, 4
	♠—K, J, 7, 5 ♡—A ◇—J, 9, 7, 5 ♣—9, 6, 3, 2

West deals and bids one heart. North has the other three suits all protected and three and a half quick tricks; so he doubles. East passes and South bids two Spades. West bids three hearts and North three spades, which ends the bidding.

West has an Ace King combination which is the most desirable for an opening lead, and he therefore leads the King of clubs in preference to his long heart suit. Dummy is spread and declarer makes a survey. He must finesse his trumps and can do so either way. He has two diamond tricks, and therefore West led clubs a in clubs but cannot see enough to go game. He plays the hand as follows:

	W	N	E	S
1	CK	C5	C7	C2
2	CA	C10	C4	C3
3	C8	CJ	S2	C6
4	H5	H3	H7	HA
5	S4	SA	S6	S5
6	S8	S3	SQ	SK
7	D8	DA	D2	D5
8	DQ	DK	D4	D7
9	H8	HJ	D6	D9
10	H9	HJ	D10	DJ
11	H10	CQ	H2	C9
12	HQ	S10	H4	S7
13	HK	S9	H6	SJ

Declarer wins four odd tricks.

East used the echo on the first two tricks, and therefore west led clubs a third time although the Queen was in dummy. This made one extra trick for East and West. At trick 4 East properly led his partner's suit as this also was leading up to the weakness in dummy. The fall of the Queen of diamonds on trick 8 enabled declarer to finesse his nine spot at trick 9 and so obtain four tricks in diamonds and four odd on the deal.

Bulgar's Folk Song

The most striking part of the Bulgarian folk song is . . . the tune, wild and mournful, in a scale neither pure minor nor major, but partaking of both. The time is strange; 5-4 and 7-4 are common, and irregular measures much more frequent than in western Europe. As is often the way among peasant singers, the songs are pitched high, and sometimes a refrain is broken by shrill cries; there is no yodeling. The melodies are short and the repetitions many. Of course, these generalizations do not take us far; simple minor and major tunes and jog trot rhythms may also be heard, but are not frequent or characteristic. —Elizabeth Marriage Mincoff in the Cornhill Magazine, England.

Spain Handicapped by Old Farm Machinery

If the old Roman plow is not soon banished from Castile there will be danger of a grave economic crisis in Spain. The average value of the Spanish wheat crop is about $400,000,000 for an area of 10,000,000 acres, mostly sown and reaped by hand. Thousands of sun-blackened men, crouching low as they toil with sickles through vast fields, betoken the backward conditions and the starvation wages. As a result of these primitive methods Castilian wheat cannot compete in the world markets, though its quality is renowned through the ages. Wheat harvested thousands of miles away in America or Argentina can be sold in Spanish ports at less than the cost price of the domestically grown cereal. The government has had to restrict wheat imports, creating an unsound economic situation. The situation can and must be saved by the extensive use of tractors, deeper tilling and increased fertilization.

Blind Persons Sure to Travel in Circles

When a blindfolded person walks in what he thinks is a straight line, he is actually going in a more or less regular clock-spring spiral, Dr. A. A. Schaeffer of the University of Kansas reported in describing new experiments before zoologists of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Doctor Schaeffer made more than 300 experiments with blindfolded persons on the open prairie of Kansas and Colorado, on the ice of a reservoir in Massachusetts, on a race track in Tennessee, and in a 160-acre field. The subjects walked, swam, rowed and drove automobiles blindfolded, and in each case they steered essentially the same kind of a curving path. Usually they started out with a straight stretch, and then began to turn in circles, and these circles usually became smaller in diameter.

Stand Up for Bagpipe

Scotsmen are aroused over the recent declaration of Sir Alexander Mackenzie that the old-fashioned fiddle and not the bagpipe, is the national instrument of Scotland. They claim that the statement is an assault on tradition that has been firmly established. When H. R. Hewels, an authority of the last century, was quoted to the effect that up to the Sixteenth century the national musical instrument of Scotland, as of Ireland, was the harp, it brought forth further protests from the champions of the bagpipe.
